SURVEY CORPS

01

Eren Yeager

The boy who refused to live in a cage

Eren grew up in the sleepy border town of Shiganshina, a hot-headed kid who hated the idea of living like livestock behind walls. The day the Colossal Titan broke through and his mother was devoured in front of him, something in him hardened into a single burning vow: destroy every Titan. He is stubborn, reckless and painfully honest, someone who loves fiercely and can't bear being held back by anyone. Inheriting his father's Attack Titan and later the power of the Founder, he walks a road that grows darker with every step, until the freedom he chases costs the world dearly and the people who loved him most have to stop him.

SURVEY CORPS

02

Mikasa Ackerman

The scarf, the blade and the promise

Mikasa's life split in two the night her parents were murdered and Eren, a boy she barely knew, led her out of that dark cabin and wrapped his scarf around her neck. Ever since, that scarf and that boy have been her whole world. Calm, loyal and almost frighteningly capable, she is the strongest soldier of her generation, yet underneath the quiet surface is a girl terrified of losing the last family she has. Her devotion is tested to its limit, and in the end she makes the hardest decision of her life with a steady hand and a breaking heart.

03

Armin Arlert

The dreamer who out-thought giants

Armin was the small, bullied kid who read forbidden books about oceans, deserts and fields of ice, and nobody expected him to change the course of a war. He never felt like a fighter, but his mind is sharper than anyone's in the Survey Corps, and again and again his plans, from Trost to Shiganshina, have saved thousands of lives. Gentle, self-doubting and quietly brave, he inherits the Colossal Titan carrying real guilt for the life it cost. In the end his gift for understanding people becomes humanity's best chance at peace, and he finally stands before the sea he always dreamed of.

SURVEY CORPS

04

Levi Ackerman

Humanity's strongest soldier

Raised in the filth of the Underground, Levi grew up fiercely obsessed with cleanliness, an irony for a man who has bled on so many battlefields. He is short, sarcastic and sharp-tongued, but behind the scowl is a deeply caring heart that mourns every comrade he loses. After Isabel and Farlan died, then his entire squad, and finally Erwin, he kept fighting for those who died believing in him. He survives the war scarred and weary, carrying every one of their wishes, and finds a measure of quiet that he has more than earned.

SURVEY CORPS

05

Erwin Smith

The commander who gambled with hearts

Erwin was a man pulled between duty and a boyish curiosity: he wanted to know the truth about the world and what lay in the basement in Shiganshina. As the 13th Commander of the Survey Corps he was charismatic, calculating and willing to sacrifice anyone, himself included, for humanity's future. He carried the weight of every death on his shoulders and never pretended it was light. At Shiganshina he led the final suicidal charge, and in his last moments Levi had to choose between letting his commander's dream live on and letting a weary man finally rest.

SURVEY CORPS

06

Hange Zoë

The joyful genius of the Corps

Hange is the Survey Corps' brilliant, boundlessly enthusiastic Titan researcher, the kind of person who names a captured Titan and then loses sleep over it. Behind the goggles and the wild laughter is a sharp strategist and a fiercely loyal friend who truly cares about people, living or dead. After Erwin's death, Hange took the Commander's burden and carried it with humour and heart. In the final days of the war, Hange gave everything to hold back the Rumbling so that the others could keep going, and left behind a legacy of curiosity and courage.

07

Jean Kirstein

The honest realist who became a leader

Jean started out wanting a safe life in the Military Police and wasn't ashamed to say so, and bickering with Eren was practically a hobby. But losing his close friend Marco taught him what this fight really costs, and he slowly grew into a steady, grounded leader who says what others are afraid to say. He is sharp-tongued but compassionate, a man who questions orders because he cares about the people they affect. By the end he is one of the most level-headed voices among the survivors, still carrying his friends with him.

08

Connie Springer

The easy-going heart of the group

Connie is the joker of the 104th, a cheerful, slightly goofy soldier from the small village of Ragako who can lighten a room even when everything is falling apart. That humour hides a wound: when he returned home, he found his village destroyed and his own family turned into Titans. Even so, he refused to let the pain make him bitter, and he clings to his friends and to his stubborn optimism. Always present at the turning points of the story, Connie is proof that kindness and laughter can survive even the worst days.

09

Sasha Braus

The girl who loved food, family and friends

Sasha grew up as a hunter in the mountain village of Dauper, a girl with a legendary appetite who once got caught stealing a potato during training and still found a way to share it. She is warm, instinctive and endlessly loyal, a sharp-eyed archer with a hunter's sense for survival. Her cheerful honesty made her the heart of her squad, and her kindness reached even strangers. Her sudden death at the hands of a grief-stricken child left her friends heartbroken and showed how deeply a war can wound everyone it touches.

10

Historia Reiss

The queen who chose to live for herself

Historia spent her early life as the unwanted illegitimate daughter of a noble family, so she learned to become Krista Lenz, the gentle angel of the 104th, always smiling and always giving. Only Ymir saw through the act, and she urged Historia to stop living for others' approval and start living for herself. After claiming the throne, she chose to be a different kind of queen, one who protects her people rather than rules them from a distance. Quiet, brave and fiercely kind, Historia finds her own strength at last.

104TH TRAINING CORPS

11

Ymir

The girl who taught someone else how to live

Ymir was a sharp-tongued, streetwise soldier of the 104th who spoke bluntly, hid her past, and watched over Historia with a gruff tenderness she never admitted to. Born an Eldian in Marley and carrying the Titan power of the Jaw, she had spent years running and surviving, and she wanted Historia to stop pleasing everyone and start living for herself. Eventually she gave herself up to the Warriors to protect the girl she loved, and her Titan power passed on to Porco.

12

Reiner Braun

The warrior who became a soldier

Reiner was raised to believe that becoming a Warrior would make him a hero and earn his family's place in Marley, and he carried the Armored Titan with that burning hope. Living among the Survey Corps and the cadets as one of them for years, he slowly cracked under the strain of being both friend and enemy. He is strong, protective and deeply haunted, a man who wanted to be a hero and ended up a villain in his own eyes. In the end, with his guilt and his war-weary heart, he fights to atone and to protect the children Marley raised to be soldiers.

MARLEYAN WARRIORS

13

Bertholdt Hoover

The quiet giant who couldn't say no

Bertholdt was tall, soft-spoken and constantly doubting himself, the kind of person who would rather stay in the background than take charge. Yet he carried the Colossal Titan, the monster that tore open Wall Maria and sent humanity into panic. He never wanted to hurt anyone, but followed Reiner out of loyalty and out of fear of being alone. His quiet friendship with Annie hinted at the gentler life he might have had in another world. In the end he was consumed by Armin at Shiganshina, leaving behind the heavy question of what he might have been.

14

Annie Leonhart

The solitary girl in the crystal

Annie was a quiet, aloof and rather indifferent soldier who kept everyone at arm's length, with a deadly fighting style she had learned from her father. Beneath that cold surface was a girl who just wanted to return home to him, and who chose to protect that one hope above everything else. As the Female Titan she fought the Survey Corps hard, and when cornered she sealed herself in crystal rather than be captured. Years later, when she woke, she faced a world that had changed and a chance to choose a different path.

15

Zeke Yeager

The weary philosopher of the Beast

Zeke is Eren's half-brother and the Beast Titan, a tall, laid-back man who hides his bitterness behind a calm smile and a love of playing catch. Raised by parents who used him as a tool for their cause, he grew into a man who believes the cycle of suffering can only be broken by ending the Eldian bloodline altogether. He is clever, charismatic and secretly lonely, and his cold plans conceal a boy who never had a childhood. His reunion with Eren becomes the story's most complicated bond between brothers who both want a freedom that cannot be shared.

16

Pieck Finger

The sleepy tactician on four legs

Pieck is the Cart Titan, a calm, observant Warrior who often looks half-asleep while she is quietly reading everyone in the room. Her Titan form walks on all fours, carrying heavy loads and heavy secrets, and she has spent most of her life following orders from Marley. She is gently teasing and wise beyond her years, with a tenderness for the younger Warriors that she rarely shows openly. When the world turns on its head, she chooses to stand with the people she once fought, because she has seen enough of hatred.

17

Porco Galliard

The brother who lived in the shadow

Porco is the Jaw Titan, a hot-tempered, sharp-tongued Warrior who lives in the shadow of his older brother Marcel and never quite forgave himself for being the one who survived. Gruff and cynical, he hides a protective streak for the younger Warriors, and fights with a desperate pride that wants to prove he is worthy of the legacy he inherited. His bitterness is really grief in disguise. Over the course of the war he learns how to turn that grief into something purposeful, and carries his brother's memory forward.

18

Marcel Galliard

The gentle elder brother of the Jaw

Marcel was the first Jaw Titan of the group sent to Paradis, a kind and level-headed older brother who looked after Porco and took the mission seriously. He was the one holding the team together, and the one who believed they could all return home to Marley as heroes. During the breach of Wall Maria he was devoured by Ymir, and the Jaw Titan's power passed on from him. The Warriors never stopped missing him, and Porco never stopped wishing he had been the one to go.

19

Falco Grice

The kind-hearted boy who wanted to protect

Falco is a gentle, sensitive boy from the Liberio internment zone who dreamed of becoming a Warrior so he could earn a better life for his people and protect those he loves. He is soft-hearted and honest, and the one who often tries to keep Gabi from going too far. A cruel twist of fate turned him into a Titan and made him inherit the burden of the Jaw. Through it all he never loses his compassion, and he becomes an important symbol of hope for the next generation.

20

Gabi Braun

The child soldier who learned to see people

Gabi is a fiery, proud and fiercely competitive girl who was raised to believe that the devils of Paradis must be destroyed, and who trained tirelessly to become a Warrior. She is driven, brave and stubborn, but also carries a child's anger that was shaped by those around her. The pain she caused cost her dearly, and she is forced to face what her hatred has done. Over time, by living among the very people she was taught to fear, she slowly learns to see them as human beings and finds a better way forward.

YEAGER FAMILY

21

Grisha Yeager

The doctor haunted by his own choices

Grisha was a doctor from Marley's Liberation Zone whose sister was killed after standing against the Marleyan authorities, and that loss set him on a path of rebellion. He joined the Restorationists, inherited the Attack Titan from Eren Kruger, and crossed to Paradis with a mission that he never fully understood. Quietly stern, gentle and tormented, he was a father who loved his family and a man who bore terrible guilt for what he had done to protect them. His choices shaped everything that came after, and he left his son a key to a truth.

22

Carla Yeager

The mother who loved her son's spirit

Carla was Eren's warm, caring mother, the kind of woman who worried about her son's reckless nature but also understood the fire inside him. She wanted him to live a long, peaceful life, and she made a home that felt like a refuge in the quiet streets of Shiganshina. When the Colossal Titan broke through the wall, she was trapped beneath a collapsed house and devoured before her children's eyes. Her death became the seed of everything Eren did afterwards, and her memory is the story's gentlest, saddest ache.

ROYAL FAMILY

23

Rod Reiss

The false king who believed in his cause

Rod Reiss was the head of the Reiss family, the true royal bloodline hidden behind the Walls, and he lived with the conviction that the Founding Titan must be reclaimed in order to preserve peace. He was calm, softly spoken and certain that he was doing what was right, even as he hurt those who stood in his way. His bid to reclaim the power failed, and his transformation into a giant, deformed Titan was both an act of faith and desperation. He died believing in a cause that history would not remember kindly.

ROYAL FAMILY

24

Frieda Reiss

The sister who carried the Founder

Frieda was the eldest daughter of the Reiss family and the holder of the Founding Titan, a woman who bore the heavy duty of protecting her people and the secrets of the Walls. She was warm and quietly wise, and she understood the cost of her power. She also protected her half-sister Historia and wanted her to be able to live a free life. When Grisha attacked her family, she was devoured by him and the Founding Titan passed on, setting in motion the chain of events that would eventually reshape the world.

25

Karl Fritz

The king who chose peace

Karl Fritz was the 145th king of the Eldian Empire, a pacifist who inherited a war-ravaged kingdom and decided that his people should never be forced into war again. He retreated to the island of Paradis with his followers, built the Walls, and sealed a vow that forbade the use of the Founding Titan for aggression. He believed that Eldians had to atone for the wars they had fought. His decision created a peaceful island but also set the stage for centuries of fear and hatred.

26

Ymir Fritz

The first Titan, bound for two thousand years

Ymir Fritz was a young slave girl who, after being wrongly accused and hunted, discovered a strange creature in a tree and gained the power that became the source of all Titans. Her loyalty to her king, even as he used her cruelly, bound her to serve and wage war for him for thousands of years. She is the root of every Titan story and the quiet heart of the tragedy, a woman who loved her king more than she could bear. In the end, the answer to her endless servitude came from someone who truly saw her.

27

Eren Kruger

The Attack Titan who turned against Marley

Eren Kruger was an Eldian who served Marley as the holder of the Attack Titan, but who slowly turned against the country that used him. When he met Grisha Yeager, he recognized someone who wanted to change the world, and he gave him the power and the purpose to do it. He was brave, bitter and quietly idealistic, a man who sacrificed himself so that another could carry the flame. His legacy ran through the life of a young boy named after him.

SURVEY CORPS

28

Petra Ral

The youngest member of Levi's squad

Petra was the youngest and gentlest member of Levi's elite squad, a soldier whose cheerful kindness made even grim missions feel a little lighter. She admired Levi deeply and wanted to prove that she was worthy of fighting beside him, and she looked out for Eren. She was dedicated, warm and brave, always trying to keep her team together. Her death at the hands of the Female Titan hit Levi hard and became one of the most painful losses the Survey Corps endured.

SURVEY CORPS

29

Oluo Bossard

The loyal imitator of Levi's squad

Oluo was a member of Levi's elite squad, a confident, slightly arrogant soldier who liked to imitate his captain's style and was a little too proud of it. He was brash, dramatic and surprisingly loyal, often rubbing his squadmates the wrong way. Behind the showmanship was a devoted soldier who genuinely wanted to be worthy of the team. He fell in battle against the Female Titan, determined to the end to protect his fellow soldiers and prove his worth.

SURVEY CORPS

30

Eld Jinn

The steady veteran of Levi's squad

Eld was the calm, experienced senior member of Levi's elite squad, a soldier whose steady presence kept the team grounded when things got tense. He was disciplined and fiercely loyal, and he trusted Levi's judgment above all. He understood that Eren was both a weapon and a young man, and he treated him with a stern kind of respect. He died in the Female Titan's ambush, one of the fallen who showed what courage looked like even against impossible odds.

SURVEY CORPS

31

Gunther Schultz

The dependable fighter of Levi's squad

Gunther was a dependable, quietly skilled member of Levi's elite squad, a soldier who preferred to let his work speak for itself. He was loyal to his captain and committed to keeping his teammates safe, and he had a calm, practical way of approaching problems. He was not flashy, but the squad relied on him in battle. He fell alongside his comrades in the ambush by the Female Titan, a loss that left his teammates and his captain grieving.

SURVEY CORPS

32

Isabel Magnolia

The bright-eyed friend from the Underground

Isabel was a cheerful, energetic girl from the Underground who idolised Levi like an older brother and brightened every room she entered. She was playful, loud and fiercely loyal, and she followed him and Farlan into the Survey Corps with a big heart and bigger dreams. She and Farlan were killed together on a mission, a loss that deeply scarred Levi and shaped the man he became. She remains a reminder of the friendship that helped him find a reason to keep going.

SURVEY CORPS

33

Farlan Church

The thoughtful leader of the Underground trio

Farlan was a clever, level-headed young man who became friends with Levi and Isabel in the Underground and helped lead their little group with calm and thoughtful instincts. He dreamed of a life on the surface and believed that they could make it there together. He was supportive and wise, someone who balanced Isabel's enthusiasm and Levi's coldness. His death alongside Isabel became one of the most painful moments in Levi's past and shaped the way he led the Survey Corps.

SURVEY CORPS

34

Mike Zacharias

The man who could smell a Titan coming

Mike was one of the Survey Corps' most capable squad leaders, famous for his remarkable sense of smell, which let him detect Titans from far away. He was quiet, observant and serious, a man whose instincts saved many lives. Erwin trusted him completely, and his reputation among the soldiers was almost legendary. His death at the hands of a Titan sent shockwaves through the Survey Corps and reminded everyone that no one, not even the best, was untouchable.

SURVEY CORPS

35

Moblit Berner

The loyal right hand of Hange

Moblit was Hange's devoted assistant, an anxious, hard-working soldier who spent most of his days keeping his chaotic squad leader out of trouble. He worried constantly, cared deeply, and followed Hange without hesitation into the most dangerous experiments. His loyalty was absolute, and he was always there with a steady hand and a nervous smile. He gave his life to save Hange at Shiganshina, a final act of love for the person he followed to the end.

104TH TRAINING CORPS

36

Marco Bott

The kind soul Jean never forgot

Marco was a warm, honest cadet of the 104th who dreamed of joining the Military Police to serve the king and protect people. He was a natural peacemaker, a calm voice in the group, and Jean's closest friend. His kindness was genuine, and everyone who knew him liked him. After overhearing something he should not have, he was killed, and Jean was left to grieve. His memory became a guiding light for Jean's growth and an enduring reminder of what the war took from them.

GARRISON

37

Hannes

The soldier who learned to be brave

Hannes was a Garrison soldier stationed in Shiganshina, a man who enjoyed his drink and was no stranger to cowardice. When the Colossal Titan appeared, he froze and failed to save Carla, a guilt that haunted him for years. Later, he chose to face a Titan to protect Eren and Mikasa, buying them the time to escape. His sacrifice redeemed him in his own eyes and showed that bravery is something you choose, even after you have failed once.

SURVEY CORPS

38

Keith Shadis

The drill instructor with a past

Keith Shadis is the gruff, intimidating drill instructor of the 104th, a former Survey Corps commander whose booming voice hides years of regret. After his expeditions cost too many lives, he stepped back and trained the next generation instead. He is stern but fair, and he sees every cadet more clearly than they realise. Years earlier he had been a friend of Grisha Yeager, and his memories of Eren's family run deeper than anyone knew.

GARRISON

39

Dot Pixis

The eccentric commander with a sharp mind

Dot Pixis is the Garrison's commander, a cheerful, bald, whiskey-loving veteran who looks like he stopped caring long ago but misses nothing. Behind the easy-going humour is a shrewd strategist who understands the stakes better than most. He trusted Armin's plan at Trost and gave a young soldier a chance to prove himself. He is the kind of leader who prefers to take a calculated risk over blind duty, and he plays the long game with remarkable calm.

40

Darius Zackly

The pragmatic Commander-in-Chief

Darius Zackly is the Commander-in-Chief of the Military, a pragmatic and level-headed man who values order and the survival of humanity. He listened carefully when Erwin explained the truth, and chose to support the Survey Corps when it counted. He is calm, honest and willing to take responsibility for tough decisions. He guided the military through a time of upheaval with a steady hand and a clear sense of purpose.

MILITARY POLICE

41

Nile Dok

The decent man in a corrupt system

Nile Dok is the commander of the Military Police Brigade, a man who is fundamentally decent but stuck in a corrupt system. He once shared a dream with Erwin, but chose a different path and ended up with a lot of responsibility. He is practical, loyal to his men and willing to do the right thing when it matters. When the truth about the Walls came out, he showed that integrity can still be found in unexpected places.

MILITARY POLICE

42

Marlowe Freudenberg

The young officer who questioned his orders

Marlowe Freudenberg is a young Military Police officer who starts out as a loyal soldier of a corrupt system and slowly begins to question what he has been told. He is earnest, quick to speak and honest enough to admit when he is wrong. After seeing the truth about the corruption in the capital, he becomes one of the few who stand up for what is right. He represents the hope that ordinary people can change when confronted with the truth.

43

Hitch Dreyse

The sharp-tongued friend who stayed loyal

Hitch is a cheerful, sharp-tongued Military Police officer who treats her job as casually as possible and spends most of her energy on looking after herself. She was a friend to Annie, and she did not forget her even after the truth came out. Underneath the lazy attitude is someone who cares more than she lets on, and who is willing to do the right thing when it counts. She is a reminder that sometimes the quiet ones are the most loyal.

44

Kenny Ackerman

The Ripper who raised Levi

Kenny Ackerman, known as Kenny the Ripper, was a notorious killer who ruled the Underground and later raised young Levi, teaching him how to survive. He was cynical, ruthless and weary of the world, a man who found it hard to believe in anything. His loyalty to the old royal family and his history with them shaped his choices more than he let on. Even after everything, he left Levi with an unspoken legacy and a final act that showed there was more to him than violence.

SURVEY CORPS

45

Floch Forster

The survivor who turned to extremism

Floch was a Survey Corps soldier who survived the battle at Shiganshina and saw Erwin's sacrifice firsthand. That day broke something in him, and he came to believe that the survival of the island demanded harsh measures. He was bitter, determined and haunted, and he became the leading voice of the Yeagerists. He is a cautionary figure, a man who took the pain of war and turned it into a conviction that made him dangerous, and who died at the climax of the conflict.

46

Willy Tybur

The public face of Marley's war

Willy Tybur was the head of the Tybur family, one of Marley's most powerful noble houses, and the man who stood on stage and declared war on Paradis. He was eloquent, confident and certain that his cause was just, and he used his voice to rally the world against the island. His speech revealed the deep prejudice the world held toward Eldians. It also became the final one he ever delivered, as Eren made his move at the very moment Willy was speaking.

47

Onyankopon

The gentle guide of the alliance

Onyankopon is a kind, practical man who grew up in Marley and, secretly, worked for the cause of peace, helping guide the Alliance with quiet courage. He is a skilled pilot and a good listener, and he takes the risks others would hesitate to take. He believes in giving people a chance to prove they can change. He quietly proved his loyalty again and again, and stood by the people who needed him most.

48

Yelena

Zeke's most devoted follower

Yelena is a passionate, fiercely devoted leader of the Anti-Marleyan Volunteers who believes completely in Zeke's vision and his plan for the future of the Eldians. She has a flair for the dramatic and a fanaticism that makes her both inspiring and unsettling. Behind the zeal is a woman who truly believes she is saving her people. She is a reminder of how far loyalty can go when it is fed by hope and fear in equal measure.
